Gertrude and Felix play cards on their balcony in the afternoon of 14.6.1942. »The radio was on and the sun was shining. They had made themselves comfortable in their armchairs. Gertrude was wearing a swimsuit, Felix's sports shorts and a sports shirt. In the garden below, a small group of Jewish men and women were busy distributing humus. Suddenly Felix rose and fetched the long Flobert gun. He started shooting at pigeons. Gertrude also tried it. Then either Gertrude or Felix pointed the rifle at the Jewish gardeners and shot a worker named Fliegner. They laughed as they left the balcony and went back into the house« (own translation from the German edition of Lower, Hitlers Helferinnen, S. 179)
